

Friday

Jan. 31, 2020

4:30 - 7:00 p.m.

OHSU Knight Cancer
Research Building
Auditorium
2720 S.W. Moody Ave.
Portland, OR 97201

Climate, Identity and Our Health: Indigenous Lessons and Voice from the Front Lines of Climate Collapse

by Tara Houska

Campaigns Director, Honor the Earth

Tara Houska (Couchiching First Nation Anishinaabe) is a tribal attorney, the Campaigns Director of Honor The Earth, co-founder of Not Your Mascots, and former advisor on Native American affairs to Bernie Sanders. She spent six months on the front lines fighting the Dakota Access Pipeline, and is currently engaged in the movement to de-fund fossil fuels and a years-long struggle against Enbridge's Line 3 pipeline.

She has given a TED talk, a keynote at Harvard, received the Awesome Women Award from Melinda Gates, and was named an "Icon" on the cover of Outside Magazine's 40th Anniversary edition. Most recently, Tara was included in National Geographic's 100 Years of Women in Change. Tara has contributed to the Guardian, Huffington Post, Indian Country Today and has been featured on CNN, MSNBC, CBS, Democracy Now, and BBC.

Please join us as we hear about the current climate status and its health impacts, learn about Indigenous communities on the front lines of climate change, and identify strategies for engagement in climate activism to improve the health of all.

4:30pm - 5:30pm Refreshments in the Atrium

5:45pm - 7:00pm Lecture in the Main Auditorium

Please RSVP:

Native American Health Seminar

If you have questions about this event please email
nativehealth@ohsu.edu

