Hollywood Theatre $265,000 facade and roof restoration underway

By mid-July, there had been no rain for 39 days, but, at the Hollywood Theatre, an overnight cloudburst forced enough water through cracked ceilings and walls to make a floor mat outside the east exit door squish underfoot. That same morning, July 13, the Theatre got a little bit noisier, but film sound tracks weren’t the source of the din. A major restoration to repair and preserve the façade and roof of the historic 99-year-old theatre began.

Theatre Executive Director Doug Whyte and Kristy Conrad, development & marketing director, pointed out some of the more sorely hit parts of the structure built in 1926 by Portland architects Bennes & Herzog at 4122 N.E. Sandy Blvd. The Hollywood Theatre originally staged vaudeville acts and was a silent-movie palace. The Spanish Colonial Revival-style edifice became such a popular destination and city landmark, that residents and visitors began to call the surrounding neighborhood the Hollywood District.

Through decades of multiple ownership, the Theatre remained an important cultural site. Many of Portland’s most famous residents, including Ken Kesey (One Flew Over the Cuckoo’s Nest) and Matt Groening (The Simpsons) went to the movies there, but the Theatre saw hard times by 1983, when it was placed on the National Register of Historic Places. By mid-July, there had been no rain for 39 days, but, at the Hollywood Theatre, installation of a new marquee replicating the 1926 original preceded the current restoration of the Theatre’s façade, re-tilling of the Theatre’s period clay roof and water leak repair throughout the building. Conrad and Whyte lauded Theatre contributors to the $265,000 restoration, for one of the Theatre’s largest projects yet: the Kinsman Foundation, Jackson Foundation, Pacific Power Foundation, ESCO Foundation, Oregon Community Foundation Community Grant Program and Collins Foundation.

“All these grants and donations complement ongoing support of the Hollywood Theatre’s board of directors, members, and donors. The Hollywood Theatre now has 1,500 members, double what we had last year,” said Whyte. He noted that three new staffers would be added to assist with the Theatre’s education program in Grant High and Open Meadow Middle schools. In all, the Theatre employs 15 and relies on the volunteer time of a couple of hundred volunteers.

More project information is available at www.hollywoodeatre.org/facade-roof-restoration.

Wine Bar first tenant to sign with Lyon Court

William Elliott of Elliott Associates has announced finalization of lease negotiations with J. Mikey Lynch to operate a wine bar at Lyon Court, a building completed earlier this year at 2893 N.E. Fremont St. in the Alameda Neighborhood. Lynch will be working over the next several months with Elliott to develop the 1,726-square-foot space into a community meeting venue.

At a March open house for businesses and neighbors, Lynch said he looked forward to opening a wine bar and that he might hire up to ten full-time and part-time employees. Lynch is a graduate of Texas A&M. He said he was planning on featuring international and local wines. “I’ve been in and around wine bars, and I know what I like, and I really want to own my own place,” he said.

Elliott told the Hollywood Star News that, in July, he had two other interested parties: one was in the lease review stage, the other was submitting a letter of intent. Elliott believes a fitness facility or small market would be good uses of the space still available, and he is still seeking an interested bar/restaurant tenant. There are three more units available at Lyon Court.

Living Cully Plaza begins development of former strip club site

A coalition of three non-profits will host a community celebration on Neighbors Night Out, Tuesday August 6, to mark the purchase of a blight-edged triangle located between Northeast Cully Boulevard, Portland Highway and Killingsworth North Street. The celebration at the site will follow completion of the July sale of the 2.18-acre property and 26,000-square-foot building valued at more than $3 million for $2.365 million and follows property securing, landscaping and clean-up in mid-July. Funds raised for the sale are a combination of loans, grants and donations, according to Living Cully executive director. Tony de Falco. Partners in the investment funding include Craft3, Portland Development Commission, Oregon Community Foundation and Meyer Memorial Trust.

De Falco told the Hollywood Star News that, during the next six months, Living Cully would be assessing community needs and how the non-profit can develop the property to meet them. Living Cully is a coalition of Hacienda, Habitat for Humanity and Verde that came together over the past ten months, as de Falco put it, “to respond to a 20-year need of Portland.”

Portland seeking citizens for zoning code panel

The City of Portland Bureau of Planning and Sustainability, in what neighborhood leaders see as a response to calls from the two-year-old United Neighborhoods for Reform (UNR) and other neighborhood groups, is creating a work group to examine the city’s current zoning code.

UNR, in its 2014 resolution endorsed by 44 Portland neighborhoods, called for a review of the size and character of replacement houses, lot splitting and lot confirmations, claiming that many neighborhoods were being severely impacted by the increase in house demolitions and replacements with one or more very large, expensive houses.

“It is crucial that our neighborhoods are well represented on this work group to prevent our voices being drowned out by the construction, real estate and development interests who will also be represented,” said Barbara Strunk, speaking for UNR. Strunk is urging residents to work with neighborhood associations to find people who are committed to this important task and can serve on this group. Those interested are asked to contact Morgan Tracy (Morgan.Tracy@PortlandOregon.gov) or Sandra Wood (Sandra.Wood@PortlandOregon.gov) with suggestions/questions about the process of choosing neighborhood representatives.

Pizza Jerk’s arrival means closure for Magoo’s Bar on Northeast 42nd Ave. in Cully

At press time, Magoo’s Bar & Grill, a well-established neighborhood institution at 5028 N.E. 42nd Ave. in the Cully neighborhood, was slated to close its doors for the last time on Friday, July 17. The business has been sold to make way for the opening of a new restaurant, Pizza Jerk, the latest offering from Bunk Sandwiches’ Tommy Habetz, an established player in Portland’s burgeoning food scene. Many neighbors were disappointed to be losing the longtime gathering place, and there are concerns within the business community about competition with existing businesses. 42nd Avenue has long been anchored by Roses Ice Cream and Rocket Pizza, which sit directly across the street.

On Tuesday, July 14, Michael DeMarco, district manager of Our 42nd Avenue, convened a discussion group at the Magoo’s site to listen to community concerns and to discuss desired outcomes. More than 35 people attended the afternoon session and many were unhappy with the news of Magoo’s closing. Magoo’s has been a neighborhood trouble spot in the past, but Gina Landtiser, the bar’s manager, has worked hard to improve the establishment’s image and has engaged the community in her efforts. “I’ve wanted to be a part of this community ever since I started here,” she said. “And that’s what I’ve done.”

“We’ve worked to build this, to make it inclusive and to make it special,” said Myo DeMayo, the Cully Farmers Market manager who had collaborated with Landtiser to secure additional space for the market in Magoo’s parking lot. “I don’t like that this is happening without our consent.”

Landtiser had plans in the works to make an offer to buy the business herself. “We’ve worked to build this, to make it special,” said Myo DeMayo, the Cully Farmers Market manager who had collaborated with Landtiser to secure additional space for the market in Magoo’s parking lot. “I don’t like that this is happening without our consent.”

According to Marty Pinz, the shop’s owner, the building, which is also home to Fairley’s Pharmacy, was constructed in 1914 and Pinz’s space was first listed with the city as a barbershop in 1915. As far as anyone can tell, it’s been a barbershop ever since. Pinz’s father, Joe Pinz, first purchased the shop in 1956, sold it in 1960 and passed away in October of 2007. He was 81 years old and had worked at the shop for 50 years. “I figure I will retire July, 2040,” said Pinz.

“I don’t think anyone should be forced out,” said Clarence Larkins, Straight Path president. “That’s why we’re here.”

Roseway Barbershop keeps clippers humming in neighborhood for 100 years

The Roseway Barbershop, 7220 N.E. Sandy Boulevard, will be celebrating 100 years of haircuts on Saturday, August 15 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. with free hot dogs, chips and water for customers and neighbors. During the anniversary party, information about the barbershop and its owners over the years will be on display, trinkets will be given away and Roseway Barbershop T-shirts will be on sale.

As far as anyone can tell, it’s been a barbershop ever since. Pinz’s father, Joe Pinz, first purchased the shop in 1956, sold it in 1960 and bought it back again in 1980. Joe Pinz passed away in October of 2007. He was 83 years old and continued to work three days a week until a few months before he passed away.

“I figure I will retire July, 2040,” said Marty Pinz. “I will be 81 and have barbeced for 50 years.”

Marty Pinz started working with his Dad in July of 1990. He graduated from Madison High in 1977 and has been enshrined as a member of the Portland Interscholastic League Hall of Fame. He’s seen some changes over the years.

“A lot has changed,” he said. “Not everything. Businesses have come and gone, but some are still here: the Mississippi. It happened in Alberta. Now it’s happening here. It’s heartbreaking. We can preserve diversity. We can have a thriving business district. This is a prized neighborhood and I’m proud to live here.”

Lloyd neighbors petition to keep movie theater

Steve Unger, owner of the Lion and the Rose Bed & Breakfast at 1810 N.E. 15th Ave. in Irvington, was concerned when he learned that Cypress Equities, the new owner of the Lloyd Center Mall, announced plans to sell the adjacent land containing the Regal Lloyd Center 10 and IMAX theaters. The buildings are slated to be demolished to allow for the construction of 900 apartment units.

“If that happens, and the theater is removed, there will be no multiplex movie theater on the East Side of Portland,” Unger said. “We and our guests love being able to walk to the movies rather than going downtown.”

Mr. Unger wrote to the CEO of Cypress Equities and has launched an online petition at www.LloydCenterMovies.com. “We generated over 100 signatures in the first three days” said Unger. “Our goal is to get 1,000 signatures.”

There have been two Regal Multiplex Theaters at Lloyd Center for many years, the Regal Lloyd Mall 8 inside, near the food court, and the Regal Lloyd Center 10 and IMAX across the street. In January, Cypress Equities closed the Regal Lloyd Mall 8 Theaters to make way for new office space.

“There are currently over 2,500 apartment units either under construction or planned in the Lloyd Center area,” said Unger. “A movie theater is an amenity that serves residents, helps generate beneficial night time activity and supports the nearby eateries. Portland’s East Side needs at least one megaplex theater.”

Hollywood Farmers Market

Market celebrates National Farmers Market Week on Sat. August 8

By Suzanne Briggs

Hollywood Farmers Market board member

The first week of August is National Farmers Market Week. On Saturday, August 8 at 11 a.m., Hollywood Farmers Market (HFM) will hold a short ceremony to highlight the achievements that have contributed to a local food movement here in Oregon and across the country.

HFM is one of 8,000 farmers markets across the country that help to preserve rural livelihood and farmland, support local economies and increase access to fresh nutritious food for all citizens. There were only 35 farmers markets in Oregon when Hollywood Farmers Market rang its first opening bell in 1997. Now there are more than 120.

Over time, the number of farmers in Oregon has decreased, due to farmland being sold for development and being consolidated into larger parcels. To try to reverse this trend, Oregon State University (OSU) held its first annual Small Farms Conference at Lane County Community College in 2000. About 125 farmers, farmers market managers and OSU extension staff attended that year to explore how to successfully build a farm direct sector of agriculture. Those efforts led to the establishment of the OSU Center for Small Farms and Community Food Systems. Now in its 15th year, the Small Farms Conference attracts more than 900 attendees, mainly young farmers, and celebrates their expanding network of providing local food. The challenge now is to find land for all those new farmers.

HFM takes pride in the fact that more than 85 percent of its vendors return each year. Seven farmers were founding vendors and have participated in the market since 1997, when the HFM was located in the former Washington Mutual Bank parking lot (now the location of Whole Foods). Over the years, market vendors have established a loyal customer base in the neighborhood, and the market is teeming with shoppers every Saturday. According to the national Farmers Market Coalition, 25 percent of farmers market vendors receive their sole source of income from their markets. Some farmers also generate additional revenues from their CSAs (Community Supported Agriculture), U-Picks and farm stands as well as selling directly to schools and health care institutions. USDA, Oregon Department of Agriculture, and foundations such as New Seasons Market and Providence Health Care are providing an increasing amount of funding to support the growing number of farm direct venues.

In an effort to make nutritious local food available for low-income shoppers, HFM began accepting SNAP (the program formerly known as food stamps) cards in 2004. Since then, more SNAP recipients have begun to shop at the market, and last year’s SNAP sales topped $22,000. This trend is mirrored nationally, where SNAP sales at farmers markets have increased by 600 percent in the past decade. To further support this goal, HFM introduced its Fresh Funds SNAP matching program in 2010. That program provides SNAP shoppers an additional $5 a week to purchase fresh products. Thanks to New Seasons Market and the HFM Board efforts, that program generated another $10,000 for HFM farmers, and helped hundreds of low-income families purchase fresh, local produce. Similar successful SNAP matching programs in other states have now led to federal funding of these programs, through the Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) program. Through a FINI grant secured by the Portland-based Farmers Market Fund, HFM (along with other Oregon farmers markets) will receive additional funds to double their SNAP match program in 2016, a $10 weekly match for each SNAP customer.

Come celebrate all of these milestones and more as part of National Farmers Market Week on Saturday, August 8 at 11 a.m. Raise your morning coffee at Hollywood Farmers Market and help us thank the farmers, staff and volunteers for their contribution to our market’s success.

The Hollywood Farmers Market is located on Northeast Hancock Street between 44th Avenue and 45th avenues, one block south of Sandy Boulevard. It is open every Saturday from April through March. Market hours are 8 a.m.-1 p.m. from April to September and 9 a.m.-1 p.m. from October to April. Dogs are welcome in the Market after 10 a.m. For more information, visit hollywoodfarmersmarket.org.

“Coming together is a beginning; keeping together is progress; working together is a success.” – Henry Ford

There is a lively buzz at the Northeast Community Center (NECC) – an undercurrent of excitement and anticipation. In the 10 years since it was founded by a dedicated group of community volunteers, the NECC has grown by leaps and bounds, serving the fitness, wellness, sports, recreational and enrichment needs of all ages in our community. In recent months, the “Fit” in the NECC’s historic building has felt a bit snug, and the NECC is thrilled to announce the opening of an additional 4,500-square-foot space. Dubbed “the Annex,” this new space is located at 1606 N.E. 37th Ave., adjacent to the current NECC parking lot in the space that formerly housed the Portland Adventure Shop, which is located in the same building, and the NECC. We are looking for opportunities to work together in providing workshops, fitness classes, and special events.

The Annex is located next door to another local non-profit organization, Dress for Success. When Montagriff heard about the availability of the space, she immediately contacted the landlord, David Pietka. “David has been very active in our community, and he was excited about developing a cooperative relationship between the Mountain Shop, which is located in the same building, and the NECC. We are looking for opportunities to work together in providing workshops, fitness classes, and special events.”

What else could possibly happen in the space? We are buzzing with ideas – a bouldering wall? Youth birthday parties? Yoga conferences? Unlike most fitness centers, the NECC is a non-profit and receives no money from the city, county, or Portland Parks and Recreation – it is about the kids, families, and individuals, young and old, who live, work and play in the Hollywood and surrounding neighborhoods. So, is there fitness, wellness, recreational, learning or cultural class or programming you would like to see at your neighborhood non-profit community center? Drop us a line and let us know – we would like to hear from you and can be reached at info@necommunitycenter.org.
Health care clinic marks 20 years in Beaumont Village

The Beaumont Health Care Clinic, offering several types of therapies, is celebrating its 20th year at 4445 N.E. Fremont St. Dr. Lori von der Heydt, a naturopathic physician, began her practice shortly after graduating from the National College of Natural Medicine.

Today, the clinic offers acupuncture, massage, counseling and an art therapist in addition to naturopathic medicine. Once referred to as "alternative medicine," these disciplines are becoming accepted in integrated health care systems, said Dr. von der Heydt.

The independent practitioners working at Beaumont Health Care include Andrine de la Rocha, a licensed massage therapist who joined the clinic 16 years ago. Carla Welker a licensed social worker, arrived more than 10 years ago. Jen Conjerit, a licensed acupuncturist, and Kyra Plume, a licensed massage therapist, each have been at the clinic for three years. Sally Giles, an art therapist who offers services one day each week, arrived earlier this year.

The clinic's clients often tell her they appreciate the accessibility to their practitioner and the individualized care provided, said Dr. von der Heydt. For instance, patients are greeted by the practitioner because the clinic doesn't have a receptionist. Dr. von der Heydt and de la Rocha do home visits when necessary.

"Being a multi-disciplinary clinic," the doctor said, "collaboration is fostered, especially for complicated cases where many skills are necessary."

In addition to patient care, Dr. von der Heydt and other practitioners have helped build community in the Beaumont-Wilshire area and they encourage reading. The literary support comes from a pie safe in the clinic's waiting area. The pie safe was built by von der Heydt's father, but it doesn't have dessert. It has free books of all varieties for the taking.

Brothers merge stamp companies

A-Z Stamp and Engraving, which has been in the Hollywood District for 22 years, merged with Rose City Stamp Inc. on August 1.

With the merger, Larry Beaudoin, who operated A-Z with his wife, Jan, will be working once again with his brother, Ron, to provide an array of pre-inked and self-inking rubber stamps and other marking supplies. Ron and another brother, Jeff, had an unrelated third partner in 1988 when they started Rose City Stamp, 335 S.E. 99th Ave. A few years later, Larry joined them. After a few more years, he left to open A-Z, which has been at 3331-A N.E. Sandy Blvd.

The merger of A-Z and Rose City came about for several reasons, said Jan Beaudoin, but the clincher was the sale of the Sandy Boulevard building and the new owner's rent increase.

Both companies supply the specialty stamps used on official documents by engineers, architects and notaries public. They also have supplies for other commercial and personal uses, said Jan Beaudoin.

The Beaudoin brothers started making stamps when type was set by hand. Then they went to computer-generated typesetting. Now, high-power laser engraving is part of the industry.

Online orders, with customers from virtually anywhere in the world, make up a growing part of the business, said Jan Beaudoin. The Rose City website is www.rosecitystamp.com.

Mobile barbershop makes haircut convenient

Justin King, owner of Rooks Traditional barbershop, 2935 N.E. Broadway, has introduced a two-chair, fully equipped mobile barbershop to make a haircut and hot towel shave convenient and accessible.

Customers may call or text to schedule an appointment at (503) 816-7357 or rooksbarberbus@gmail.com.

King, who opened the Broadway shop in 2009, has a second Rooks Traditional at 3580 S.E. Division St. He plans to introduce a second bus as demand develops, he said.

In addition to the barbershops, King owns Rosewater Tattoo with his wife, Lynn, next to the Broadway shop. Explaining the mobile barbershop, he said, "We don't want an enjoyable experience, like a haircut or relaxing, hot towel shave to be an inconvenience for our customers. It should be accessible, efficient and high quality. It doesn't get any more accessible than this."

Pediatrician joins Broadway clinic

Dr. Michael G. Mazzotta, board certified in pediatrics and internal medicine, will begin seeing patients in September at the Broadway Medical Clinic, 4212 N.E. Broadway.

Dr. Mazzotta and his wife have two children. He enjoys family time and is interested in sports and outdoor activities. He also is an avid runner.

He will focus on pediatric care at the clinic, which is open six days a week. The hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. The telephone is (503) 249-8787. The website is www.broadwaymedicalclinic.com.

If you’ve traveled the mean streets of Beaumont Village at dawn, you may have seen them. In the winter, they’re easy to spot. Optic-yellow vests, decked out with flashing lights from the Bike Gallery, cut a swath through the morning gloom. In the summer they’re harder to see, but you can still hear them coming, chatting happily over the din of the morning birds.

They’re the Ladies Who Walk. They’ve been treading the same 3.5-mile route, rain or shine, sleet or snow (no ice or extreme wind), every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning for 30 years. Maybe more.

The group doesn’t have an official moniker. Some call them the Walking Ladies. Others call them the Ladies Who Know Everything.

They start at 6:15 a.m. Their route includes a series of hills and the three sets of public stairs that cut through the massive blocks that bolster the Alameda Ridge. The route is plotted along a path that passes the homes of four walkers. Most of the walkers meet at one spot and others join along the way. The long-standing route and regular time make it easy for stragglers and late-sleepers to rendezvous with the pack as they progress through the neighborhood. By 7:40 a.m. they’re back home and ready to proceed with the routines of the day.

The women have been friends for many years, but their fitness regimen has added an element of reliability and familiarity to their relationship that nurtures and fortifies enduring bonds.

“They’re all great women, so for me it’s been terrific,” said Karen LaCrosse, one of the group’s founding members. “If it weren’t for the walking group, I wouldn’t have met any of them. They’ve enriched my life in so many ways.”

LaCrosse and Anne Kelly Feeney, the group’s nominal leader, began walking together in the early 1980s. They met, as young mothers, on LaCrosse’s doorstep, when Feeney was canvassing for a campaign that neither can now remember. With children the same age, their families grew close and they vacation together every summer. They’re both retired now. LaCrosse was once the business manager for the Madeleine Parish in Irvington. Feeney was an auditor for Multnomah County and served as director of the Loaves and Fishes program in Hollywood.

Feeney had met a group of walkers while visiting in Sacramento, and copied their model for the group that she and LaCrosse began. Some members have come and gone over the years, but the core of the group has been walking together for at least 20 years.

“Some of us met when our children were toddlers,” said Feeney. “Now we have grandchildren who are older than our children were then.”

Four of the walkers are still working. Ann Labray is a psychologist in private practice. Carol Turner is a facilitator – continued on page 16 and organization development consultant. Karyl Whelan is the charitable campaign manager for the City of Portland. Isabelle Zifcak is the owner of Mt. Tabor Realty in Southeast Portland. The “newest” member of the group, Judy Thodos, used to manage her husband’s architecture firm and was a broker at Paulsen Investment. (Her daughter, Jackie, owned the Bagel Land bakery in the neighborhood for many years.) The women walk together three times a week. Every week. If it’s a holiday, they start a little later. At 7:15 a.m.

“The size of the group is partly about safety, but it’s also about accountability,” said Feeney. “It gives you some incentive to get out of bed. You know that there will always be someone out there to walk with you.” There have been scrapes over the years. Both Zifcak and Whelan fell and broke wrists (Whelan twice) when they had gotten a late start and were hightailing to catch up.

The women are not fans of poorly-maintained sidewalks or overgrown shrubbery. They’ve been known, on occasion, to bring along a pair of garden shears to improve landscaping or remove an errant twig that could take out an eye. The women are advocates for safety and encourage a commitment to visibility for fellow walkers. The flashing lights aren’t just for show. They’ve consulted a walking coach, Judy Heller, to improve their gait and stride and have modified their route over the years, based on her advice.

The walkers and their families enjoy travel. Between the seven of them, they’ve been all over the globe. “The days you really don’t want to miss are the days when someone is coming home from a trip,” said Whelan. “Those days the stories are especially good.” According to Zifcak. “The Walking Ladies know about everything.”

As they’ve grown older together and raised their families together, the women have developed something of a reputation for knowing just about everything that there is to know. When Zifcak was helping to plan her daughter Sophie’s wedding some years ago, she found herself frequently referring back to one bit of wisdom or another. “Mom,” said her exasperated daughter, “We live in the highest-voting zip code in Oregon,” added Turner. “We go over all the local elections. State, city, school board. We all have our opinions.”

The women walk together three times a week. Every week. If it’s a holiday, they start a little later. At 7:15 a.m. “The days the stories are especially good.” According to Zifcak. “The Walking Ladies don’t know everything.”

But, what if, just maybe, they do? For more information, or to start your own walking group (that might last for thirty years) visit www.oregonwalks.org.

Faubion students, staff will use Tubman building until new, bigger school completed

By Janet Goetze
For the Hollywood Star News

Ten yellow school buses will head to Tubman Middle School August 27-28 when Portland Public Schools classes begin, but they won’t be filled with middle school students. The buses will carry the “Faubion Family” of kindergarten through eighth grade students.

Demolition of the 1950 Faubion Elementary School, built for 350 students and recently filled with about 525, is planned for October. Groundbreaking for a larger school is scheduled for February, 2016, with completion by fall, 2017, at 3039 N.E. Rosa Parks Way.

During construction, Faubion students and staff will use the two-story Tubman building, nearly 4 miles away at 2231 N. Flint Ave. That building has a big gymnasium, library and cafeteria with play equipment in the adjacent Albina-Lillis Park.

“The move won’t be an abrupt one for Faubion’s students,” said Pamela Dye, whose daughter, Jasmine, will be in third grade. Instead, Dye said, the staff has talked to students about the move and answered their concerns about leaving one building for another.

“We’re moving as a school,” she said. “We’re still the Faubion family. We’ll be in Tubman until we get a new, rebuilt school.”

Gloria Fluker, a grandmother who served on the design committee for the new building, said school personnel “have kept people involved and have been answering all our questions.”

She picks up her granddaughter, Nevaeh Dwan-Fluker, an incoming eighth grader, after school because of her parents’ work schedule. Fluker said her granddaughter seems excited by the move.

The only complaint she’s heard from Faubion students, said Pamela Dye, whose daughter, Jasmine, will be in third grade. Instead, Dye said, the staff has talked to students about the move and answered their concerns about leaving one building for another.

Grant High School senior earns $1,000 Mattress Lot Dream Big Scholarship

Grant High School graduate Caroline Walter has earned the 2015 Mattress Lot Dream Big Scholarship. She plans to use the scholarship to help her attend Seattle Pacific University this fall.

The scholarship is awarded to seniors in Grant, Cleveland and Madison high schools. The winners must be ranked near the top of their class, attain strong scores on college entrance exams and write an essay about the dreams they’ve accomplished. Caroline inspired the scholarship committee with her essay about her mother’s struggle with cancer. Caroline is a National Honors Society member. She was active in Grant cross country, track/field and tennis. She’s a Young Life member and she mentors middle-school girls through her church.

Mattress Lot owners Michael and Mary Ruth award $1,000 scholarships to top eastside graduates each year. The scholarships are a way to give back to the community that’s supported the Ruth’s family business for many years.

Four young neighbors trim, weed Wisteria traffic triangle

Four young men spent three days clearing up an overgrown traffic triangle at Northeast 41st Avenue and Wisteria Drive. Now they are thinking about flowers to plant in the future.

The project started one day when Ryan Mealy, 21, a University of Portland student, called the city to see about getting a crew to weed and trim shrubbery in the triangle. After several days, no one from the city showed up, so Mealy enlisted the help of his brothers, Logan, 20, another U of P student, and Kevin, 14, who will be a Grant High School freshman. Ben Constantino, his friend from the university, joined the group.

After they began trimming and weeding, Ryan Mealy arranged a crew to weed and trim shrubbery in the triangle. He also arranged for them to take more than 15 minutes.

which sent a crew with equipment to haul away debris. The city also sent over bags of mulch, which the Mealys and Constantino spread in the triangle.

At one time, they were told, a neighbor had taken care of the triangle but no longer was available for the upkeep. To maintain their handiwork, Ryan Mealy arranged a watering system for the triangle, said his mother, Diane Mealy. Another neighbor asked her if she had encouraged the young men to clean up the triangle.

“No, I didn’t,” she said. “They did it on their own. I think it’s really cool, coming home from work and seeing an improvement every day.” – Janet Goetze

If traditional Western, veterinary medicine isn’t providing the Fluffy or Fido in your life with the relief they seek, you might want to look into the integrative medicine program offered at Lombard Animal Hospital, 607 N.E. Lombard St., in the Woodlawn neighborhood.

Husband-and-wife team, Preston Turano and Nell Ostermeier (who go by Dr. Preston and Dr. Nell) assumed ownership of the veterinary practice in November of 2007 and have been in business for almost eight years. Turano, together with Associate Veterinarian Misty Doornek, focuses on traditional, veterinary medicine, while Ostermeier is an integrative medicine specialist who combines alternative, natural options – such as acupuncture, herbs, and food therapy.

During a recent visit to the clinic, Ostermeier used veterinary acupuncture techniques to treat two cats. Nelson was treated for prevention of feline asthma and some anxiety and Macy was treated for allergies and prevention of ear infection. Both animals remained completely calm throughout the procedure and seemed much more relaxed when the work was completed.

Both cats are regular visitors to the clinic and their owners swear by Ostermeier’s natural techniques. Nelson has been weaned from a regular course of steroid injections, and the animal’s health has improved immensely since coming under Ostermeier’s care.

“I assess the patient using the principles of traditional Chinese medicine and go over alternative options that will be helpful for the pet and will likely speed up the healing process or improve the patient’s comfort,” she said. “Most people are familiar with acupuncture as a way to treat pain and arthritis. I also use acupuncture and herbs to treat internal problems such as asthma, allergies, urinary and kidney disease, gastrointestinal disturbances – virtually any other ailment or inflammatory process in the body.”

Both sides of the Lombard practice focus on individualized medicine for pets and foster a holistic approach. They aim to treat the whole pet and not just the problem. All doctors practice laser therapy – a safe, natural method that decreases pain and accelerates healing processes.

“One of the main health problems we see is pet obesity and diseases that follow, such as diabetes and earlier development of arthritis,” Ostermeier said. “We try to prevent this by educating our clients around calorie control and utilizing foods that contain high quality ingredients and no fillers.”

“Integrative medicine and acupuncture is useful in treating a host of health conditions, alone or in combination with Western medicine,” she said. “Often times, if a patient is experiencing a chronic problem or is not responding to the Western options, the other doctors will refer the patient to me.”

“When we purchased the hospital, there was no integrative medicine and I was practicing Western medicine only,” Ostermeier said. “I was getting frustrated with the limitations, especially with senior or debilitated pets who could not tolerate pain medications. I was looking for a way to provide additional comfort without additional stress on the body.”

Turano and Ostermeier live in Rose City Park, near the Hollywood district, and most of their staff live in North and Northeast Portland.

Staff member Denise Kayser appreciates the passion that Turano and Ostermeier have brought to the neighborhood.

“Having grown up and lived in North Portland, I developed a deep attachment, love and respect for the area, our community and the diversity of its people. I have witnessed and seen first-hand the challenges and problems our community faces,” she said. “I have also witnessed and seen its progress, potential and promise. Lombard Animal Hospital is definitely part of that promise. Dr. Nell and Dr. Preston have built a solid reputation within our community through their dedication and commitment.”

“I love that the hospital is owned by a husband-and-wife team that are dedicated to providing a whole-pet approach to each patient’s health, the value the team places on the human-animal bond, the partnership between client and veterinarian and the hospital’s commitment to exceptional quality veterinary services,” she said.

“It has been very interesting and exciting to see the Woodlawn neighborhood begin to thrive over the past eight years,” Ostermeier said. “There is a steady influx of healthy new businesses, increasing what our little pocket of the city has to offer.”

“We saw a lot of potential in Lombard Animal Hospital and felt it could provide the starting point for building the practice we had been brainstorming about for years,” she added. “A place where we could share our ideal that healthy, happy pets make healthy, happy people.”

“In addition to treating dogs and cats, the hospital provides health care for rabbits, small mammals, birds and reptiles. For more information on treatment or to make an appointment, you can contact the clinic at (503) 285-2337 or visit the website at www.lombardanimalhospital.com.”

Milagro gains grants for arts

The Miracle Theatre Group, also known as Milagro, the Northwest’s premier Latino arts and culture organization, has received grants totaling more than $35,250 in recent months.

The grants, said Sarah Fitzsimmons, with the foundation, include Dugoni and Rensch Orthodontics, Chase of Windermere Realtors. Others include Broadway Books, Broadway Grill & Bar, Wells Fargo, and Wilsonville’s Family Fun Center.

Wells Fargo awarded $500 for Milagro’s general operating support. The grant was made in honor of Victor Merced, of Hacienda Community Development Corporation, for his service on the Wells Fargo Advisory Board.

The Kinsman Foundation, established in 1985 for John and Elizabeth T. Kinsman of Milwaukie, contributed a grant of $17,500 to support Milagro’s 2015-16 theater season. The Ventura Group provided $1,366 to support a performance of the touring production “By the Light of the Moon,” in Selma, Ca. The play explores Chicanos history from the time of the Aztecs to the present. The Shubert Foundation awarded $15,000 for general operating support.

The foundation, named for the New York theater family, supports live performing arts, especially theatre and dance.

Businesses, organizations support Grant High School graduation party

Grant High School’s 2015 graduation class had a safe and successful all-night party, thanks to contributions from other individuals, families and more than 40 local businesses and organizations, said Michelle Hill, who headed the event’s procurement committee.

“Thank you for your generous contributions to our drug and alcohol-free All Night celebration,” Hill said in a written message.

The supporters she listed include AAA Oregon/Idaho, Alameda Brewing Co., Alameda PTA, ASAP Logistics/SEKO, Oregon/Idaho, Alameda Brewing Co., Sweet Basil Thai, Twisted Yarn Shop and Wilsonville’s Family Fun Center.

Grants to help protect streams

The Portland City Council has approved grants totaling $100,000 for 13 community groups working on projects protecting the health of streams and rivers.

Grants of up to $10,000 were available for Community Watershed Stewardship Programs this summer in North, Northeast and Southeast Portland, according to Linc Mann, a spokesman for the Bureau of Environmental Services.

The stewardship program is a partnership between the bureau and Portland State University. Since 1995, the program has granted more than $1 million for watershed improvements and helped organize more than 40 volunteers to work on stream restoration.

One of the programs is organized by Dharma Rain Zen Center, which received $7,480 to continue work on the Siskiyou Community Garden with Multnomah School, Groundwork Portland and neighbors.

Another grant of $8,600 went to the Columbia Slough Watershed Council to engage youth leaders from the Multnomah Youth Cooperative and North Portland students to restore three acres along the Columbia Slough. It is territory next to the Columbia Boulevard Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Holcim for Humanity received $9,940 for the Cully Rain Gardens. Habitat partnered with Verde and Our 42nd Avenue Prosperity Initiative to identify low-income homeowners with stormwater problems. In addition, the organization will provide leadership opportunities for youth through its project.

A list of this year’s grant recipients is at www.portlandoregon.gov/CWS. The Bureau of Environmental Services works with residents and businesses to protect water quality and to attract用了“public input and the environment through wastewater collection and treatment, stormwater management and stream and watershed restoration.

Pea Pod sets toddlers playschool

The non-profit Pea Pod Family Resource Center is enrolling families with children 18 months to 3.5 years for a play-based program starting in September.

The program could be described as a pre-kindergarten, said Tara Sawyer, an organizer of Pea Pod. The playschool will be held 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. It is housed within the Portland Waterfront schools, 4911 N.E. Couch St.

Pea Pod is a shared support system for families, who are expected to help run the programs, Sawyer said. “This is a good fit for families that have at least one caretaker with a flexible schedule,” she said.

In addition to the young children’s group, Pea Pod is accepting applications for afternoon playgroups to begin in September for children 3 to 6 years old. The hours will be 1-4 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

Information and an application are available at www.peapodpx.org. A visit may be arranged by calling (503) 516-4680.

Humane Society plans photo contest

The Oregon Humane Society is encouraging pet lovers to enter the Fuzzy, Furry & Feathered Friends Photo Contest. The deadline for submitting entries is August 16, said David Lytle, a spokesman for the Humane Society. The fee is $10 for the first five submitted photos. Details are available at oregonhumane.org/photocontest.

The Grand Prize winner will receive a $500 gift card from Pro Photo Supply and a $250 gift card from Frame Central, both sponsors of the event. Winners in each category will be featured in the society’s fall 2015 magazine. The categories include Best Dog, Best Cat, Other Companion Animal, Me and My Pet (an adult with an animal), Child with Pet, Cat Couple, Funniest Photo and Editor’s Choice.

In addition to cats and dogs, the contest highlights such pets as rabbits, rodents, birds, and others.

All entries become the property of the Oregon Humane Society, which may, at its discretion, copy, edit, publish, use, adapt, and/or modify entries in any manner, in any and all media, without limitation. Submitter does not relinquish rights to use photo in any way.

Hollywood library to close for renovations

The Hollywood branch library will be closed for renovations August 10-30, said Shawn Cunningham, director of communications for the Multnomah County Library. The book drop will be unavailable, too, but materials may be returned to any other library branch.

The Hollywood’s worn, 13-year-old carpet will be replaced, public spaces will get new paint and a new information desk will be added. A new table will arrive for children’s iPads. Two new storage cabinets will be added. Shelves, tables and computers will be reconfigured.

The changes are part of a scheduled preventative maintenance plan, Cunningham said.

During the closure, patrons may use other branches, including Albina, 3665 N. Albina Ave.; Broadway, 414 E. 39th Ave.; Gregory Heights, 7291 N.E. Sandy Blvd., and North Portland, 512 N. Killingsworth St.

Patrons may choose to update their home library online or by telephone at (503) 988-3542 to have holds delivered to another branch. Before the closure, library staff may help with patron questions and account issues.

“Hollywood library is heavily used by its community,” said library manager Bryan Fearn. “Last year alone, patrons walked through our doors more than 415,000 times. These updates will ensure that the library continues to be a bright, welcoming, and safe public space for years to come.”

History of merchants

Platted around 1911, the Roseway neighborhood is bounded on the west by Northeast 62nd Avenue, on the north by Northeast Prescott Street, on the east by 82nd Avenue, and on the south by Northeast Sacramento Street. South of Northeast Fremont Street, Roseway is bounded on the west by Northeast 65th Avenue.

In 1926, George A. Denfeld published 65 Years: Lives and Legends in Upper Sandy Boulevard (57th to 82nd), documenting Roseway’s history and events from the early 1920s. In 1947, fifty-four business owners met at the Roseway Theater and formed the Upper Sandy Merchants’ Association, electing Denfeld as the first president. The business group defined its boundaries from Northeast 56th to 83rd Avenues, from Northeast Sacramento to Prescott Street. Denfeld cites 25 grocery stores within the merchant’s association, including George’s Food Market, which he opened in 1935. Denfeld didn’t begin his career in retail, however.

After receiving a bachelor’s degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1917, Denfeld taught at several universities before moving to Portland in 1920. By 1925, he left academia and started working at Piggly Wiggly Market, located on Sandy Boulevard and Northeast 78th Avenue. Ten years later, Denfeld opened an independent grocery store, George’s Food Market, when Herb Fairley built an addition to his drug store located at 7206 N.E. Sandy Blvd. Within six months, Piggly Wiggly closed its doors but Denfeld remained in the grocery business for 46 years until his retirement in 1981.

Denfeld, a personal friend of Fred G. Meyer, learned Meyer was evaluating a site on Northeast Sandy Boulevard near 70th Avenue to build a new Fred Meyer shopping center. In 1948, Meyer bought property from Northeast 69th to 71st Avenues and demolished several houses. When Eugene Murray refused to sell his home on Northeast 69th Avenue, Meyer built the Piggly Wiggly closed its doors but Denfeld remained in the grocery business for 46 years until his retirement in 1981.

In 1985, George A. Denfeld published 65 Years: Lives and Legends in Upper Sandy Boulevard (57th to 82nd), documenting Roseway’s history and events from the early 1920s. In 1947, fifty-four business owners met at the Roseway Theater and formed the Upper Sandy Merchants’ Association, electing Denfeld as the first president. The business group defined its boundaries from Northeast 56th to 83rd Avenues, from Northeast Sacramento to Prescott Street. Denfeld cites 25 grocery stores within the merchant’s association, including George’s Food Market, which he opened in 1935. Denfeld didn’t begin his career in retail, however.

After receiving a bachelor’s degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1917, Denfeld taught at several universities before moving to Portland in 1920. By 1925, he left academia and started working at Piggly Wiggly Market, located on Sandy Boulevard and Northeast 78th Avenue. Ten years later, Denfeld opened an independent grocery store, George’s Food Market, when Herb Fairley built an addition to his drug store located at 7206 N.E. Sandy Blvd. Within six months, Piggly Wiggly closed its doors but Denfeld remained in the grocery business for 46 years until his retirement in 1981.

Denfeld, a personal friend of Fred G. Meyer, learned Meyer was evaluating a site on Northeast Sandy Boulevard near 70th Avenue to build a new Fred Meyer shopping center. In 1948, Meyer bought property from Northeast 69th to 71st Avenues and demolished several houses. When Eugene Murray refused to sell his home on Northeast 69th Avenue, Meyer built the Rose City Shopping Centre around Murray’s house. Long-time Roseway resident Bonnie LaDoe recently recalled attending the 1949 carnival-like opening celebration and rode the iconic Ferris wheel that was set up in the parking lot. Cited as one of the largest stores with roof parking, escalator, grocery and drug sections in Portland, Rose City Fred Meyer operated for 42 years until it shuttered in 1991.

Fred Leeson, who authored the definitive biography of Fred Meyer, My-Te-Fine Merchant (Irvington Press, 2013), wrote that approximately 100 small business owners from Sandy Boulevard attended the opening ceremony of the Rose City store. “While homeowners might not want the intrusion of a big store in their neighborhoods, nearby businesses loved Fred Meyer. They fed on the traffic his one-stop shopping centers attracted,” wrote Leeson. In 1991, the Rose City Fred Meyer was leveled and a new Safeway grocery store, 6901 N.E. Sandy Blvd., was built one block west. Murray’s home was removed and relocated to North Portland according to LaDoe.

Roseway landmarks
Northeast Sandy Boulevard cuts diagonally through Roseway, showcasing a handful of businesses that date back to the early 20th century. An independent grocery store built by C.W. Emmrich in 1911, at 690 E. 67th St. N., is the oldest commercial building in Roseway. Today, located next door, Pizzeria Otto, 6708 N.E. Sandy, previously housed St. Germaine Cleaners, Fairley’s Pharmacy, 7206 N.E. Sandy Blvd., opened in 1913 and has been locally owned and operated since. They’ve updated their soda fountain menu to include espresso drinks, in addition to traditional phosphate sodas.

Former boxer Joe Pinz bought Roseway Barber Shop, 7220 N.E. Sandy Blvd. in 1956, and his son, Marty joined the family business in 1990. (See the Star’s coverage of the 100-year anniversary of the shop on page six.) The Roseway Theater, 7229 N.E. Sandy Blvd., opened in 1924 and ownership changed over the decades until Greg Wood acquired it from Bob and Kathy Kane. While the theatrical pipe organ is long gone, the theater’s been substantially renovated while preserving the historical integrity.

A number of Asian markets and businesses moved into Roseway during the 1970s and 1980s, according to long-time resident Ted Carlston. The Rose City Liquor Store, 7253 N.E. Sandy Blvd., was previously an attorney’s office and originally housed a cafe, according to Bonnie LaDoe.

The Portland International District formed in 2007, replacing The Upper Sandy merchants association whose legacy continues today with an international vibe, including Mama Leo’s Restaurant, 6728 N.E. Sandy Blvd, featuring Venezuelan and Columbian cuisine and Bacchi’s Italian Deli, 6633 N.E. Sandy Blvd. Roseway merchants from the last century might be delighted to see vintage items for sale at Dr. Tongue’s I Had That Shoppe, 7129 N.E. Fremont St. and surprised to see Roseway Play Café, which recently opened at 7135-37 N.E. Fremont, serving coffee and pastry to adults while kids play in a fun environment.

Roseway residents witness history
Bonnie LaDoe grew up in Roseway and lived most of her life there before relocating to a retirement community in East Portland earlier this year. LaDoe was 10 years old when her parents moved from North Portland to Roseway in 1947. She attended Gregory Heights School and graduated from Grant High School in 1955. LaDoe began working for U.S. Bank after school during her senior year and didn’t leave until she retired in 1994.

LaDoe is an avid genealogist and has catalogued a treasure trove of historical material and photos featuring Roseway. She’s documented the histories of numerous businesses located in the Upper Sandy business district, including the first Safeway built in 1940 on Northeast Sandy Boulevard. LaDoe has the June 6, 1947 issue of a newspaper serving Roseway that was subsequently named “Upper Sandy News.” Today, 78-years-old LaDoe recalls with clarity what it was like growing up in Roseway and has conducted a few oral history interviews to document life in a neighborhood where she lived for 58 years. Life in Roseway resident Ted Carlston recalls when grocer George Denfeld, who lived on Northeast 72nd Avenue, closed his last store at 6127 N.E. Fremont St. “I lived my whole life in Roseway so I take an interest here,” said Carlston. His grandmother traveled west in 1905 from the Dakotas to attend the Lewis & Clark Expo, and stayed. His grandparents lived on Northeast 76th Avenue, in the same

Until she opened a garden retail store, Hollywood, at the time it lacked a grocery store, so she and her husband, Miles TeSelle moved to Roseway. The house they found "was painted Pepto Bismol pink on the outside," said Hood, "but we knew it had potential and bought it." She recently recalled visiting artist Claude Monet’s home in Giverny, France, noting a similar paint color scheme. "The previous owner must have fancied herself an Impressionist,” said Hood, smiling. While researching the history of their property, Hood and TeSelle are the third owners who’ve lived and owned homes here.” According to Hood, Roseway is a quiet working class neighborhood. “It’s a tight-knit community where Carlston was raised. "We were dirt poor," said Carlston, whose family didn’t own a car, and ultimately paid $5,000 for their family home. "Roseway won’t become a vibrant community with three generations of families while living in Roseway. Hijack, their Percheron draft horse raised two Doberman pinschers while living in Roseway. Hijack, their 3-year-old dog, enjoys walking the perimeter of the nearby Rose City golf course with his owners. Hood owned a mare growing up in East County and worked for a horse farm prior to attending college. “It’s really cheap therapy to be around horses,” she said. Her passion for horses led her to volunteer for Sound Equine Options, a non-profit organization located in Eagle Creek, Oregon. The organization was initially founded to provide food for neglected horses, and they’ve partnered with OHS and other rescue organizations to rescue, train and re-home horses. Roseway Neighborhood Association breaking records

Erik Carr, current chair of the Roseway Neighborhood Association (RNA) said Roseway had a record number of volunteers helping with the neighborhood clean-up event in June, and February’s tree planting event at the park blocks was a huge success with 50 volunteers participating. RNA provides a forum to advocate for positive changes for residents and actively supports the business community. "Roseway has an active Tree Team and partners with Portland’s Urban Forestry program to make the park blocks an amazing asset for the community," said Carr. The RNA anticipates large crowds attending upcoming summer concerts and movies in Wellington and Glenhaven parks. For more information: Visit roseway.org.

Erik Carr, who works at a small machine shop in Northeast Portland, has served on the board of the Roseway Neighborhood Association (RNA) and is currently vice chair. He said increased traffic through Roseway represents one of the biggest changes he’s seen during the past 20 years, specifically commuters from downtown Portland who discovered Northeast Sandy Boulevard as the shortest commute distance to 1-205. The major arterial, particularly at the intersection of Northeast Sandy Boulevard, Northeast Fremont Street, and Northeast 72nd Avenue, causes safety concerns for residents and the intersection creates confusion for drivers. Correction: In June’s Out and About Column, the name of Portland artist Lee Hunt who created bronze life-size sculptures depicting three Beverly Cleary characters on the westside of Grant Park was inadvertently omitted.
