FORREST "JOE" RIEKE 1960

Forrest "Joe" Rieke, a prominent Portland defense attorney who served 15 years on the Portland School Board, died of a heart attack August 29, 2011 at the age of 69. Joe was born on May 26, 1942 and graduated from Wilson in 1960. According to The Oregonian, known for his imposing presence, the bearded 6-foot-3 former Stanford University football player was a warmhearted champion of improving educational outcomes, particularly of low-income and special education students, said those who worked with him. "He was passionate for making a difference for kids who didn't have that voice," said Josie Hashemian, an executive assistant who has worked closely with school board members during 32 years with the district. Rieke also helped preserve school sports programs, introduce school health clinics and advocate other holistic approaches to good schools, former colleagues said. On the national level, Rieke fought for federal funding for urban schools as a leader of the Council of the Great City Schools. Locally, he brought a sense of history to school board decisions.

His mother, the namesake for Mary Rieke Elementary School, served 12 years on the school board and he then served 15, far longer than most, said Steve Griffith, whose eight years on the board overlapped with Joe Rieke's service. Frank McNamara, another fellow board member, said Rieke "served in very hot, very troublesome times" with protests over desegregation, strike threats by the teachers union and school closures. "He liked to come on strong on an issue, but he was not without flexibility." Rieke began his 40-year legal career as a prosecutor in the Multnomah County district attorney's office but spent 35 years as a defense attorney, primarily representing indigent clients. In the final decade of his career, Rieke focused on representing people facing the death penalty for murder, drunken driving, arson and other crimes. In every case, he managed to avoid a death sentence for his client, said Chris Clayhold, a longtime legal associate and partner. On the school board and in the courtroom, the big man with the big voice made plain his strong views but in measured tones.

Outside his hard-charging job and long hours on the school board, Rieke's priority was family: his wife, Donna, and their children, Maryjane and Forrest, who, like his father, goes by another name, in his case Abe. Joe coached their sports teams even when he didn't know soccer or basketball rules well. "We didn't win many games, but we had more fun than any other team," Maryjane Rieke recalls of middle school basketball. The family spent happy times at their Mount Hood cabin and, after their children left home, Joe and Donna Rieke lived there year-round. A memorial service for Joe was held at the Portland school district headquarters at 501 North Dixon Street on Sept. 23. In addition to his wife and children, Joe is survived by his brother, John '71, and sister, Mary Macklin Reaugh.

WILSON FAMILY STILL GIVING BACK TO THE COMMUNITY
