LOOKING AFTER MINIDOKA: AN AMERICAN MEMOIR

Neil Nakadate graduated from Wilson in 1961, was elected the Senior Class President in '60-'61, and went to Stanford University, along with Wilson classmates Gary Severson and Carole Hanson.

At Stanford he majored in English and graduated in 1965, and then later earned his M.A. and Ph.D. in American Literature from Indiana University. Neil taught at the University of Texas, but spent most of his 40-year career as a professor at Iowa State University in the Department of English. Today, he is a Professor Emeritus after retiring in 2010, but he continues to write.

Over the years Neil has written several books, the two most recent being Understanding Jane Smiley (a comprehensive study of her fiction) and in October 2013 Looking After Minidoka: An American Memoir (nonfiction, focusing on his Japanese American family) through history, memories, and personal reflection. Here's a link to the book on the Indiana Univ. Press site:

http://www.iupress.indiana.edu/product\_info.php?products\_id=807044.

Neil reflects, "among the Wilson faculty who made a particular impact on me were Roy Lindsey and Virginia Bartel, who succeeded in teaching me math despite my left brain limitations, and inspirational English teachers Troy Horton and Annabel Ashley." He says, "current students should plan on continuing to learn and to adapt to changes in the workplace and American culture."

Topic: Parenting to Support Healthy Teens

Speakers: Susan Korte and Megan Kovacs

Susan Korte: Teen years are the toughest transition years for any parent to deal with. Your child goes from totally dependent to completely independent within 7 years, and it's overwhelming to know whether to trust, to let go, or to hold on—and you feel like your internal balance is totally off without knowing what to do. Please join Susan Korte, a mother of three teen daughters, to learn some core skills to turn your relationship from being a push-pull between you and your teen to a relationship with more positive communication and understanding. Susan holds a Bachelors of Arts in Communications from BSU, is a Certified Professional Coach from iPEC, is ELI-MP Certified, and has a PhD in Motherhood and Teens.

Megan Kovacs: Want some tools to talk to your teens about their relationships? Together we can create a safer, more supportive community at Wilson and in Portland Public Schools. With the passage of the Healthy Teen Relationships Act, health classes are more and more addressing relationship dynamics with youth. Please join Megan Kovacs, Education Coordinator from Raphael House of Portland, to learn the background of HTRA, what's being taught in schools because of it, and how to reinforce these lessons at home so that we can build a safer and stronger community at Wilson.
