COMMUNITY NEWS

In the dark days of Portland winters, we need to adjust our driving and walking habits to keep everyone safe. Depth perception, color recognition and peripheral vision can be compromised in the dark, and the glare of headlights from oncoming vehicles can temporarily blind drivers and pedestrians.

Here are some tips to improve road safety:

- Slow down near all crosswalks, intersections and stops. Cyclists and pedestrians will be harder to see.
- Adjust your speed according to weather conditions.
- Maintain a safe distance between the vehicles in front of you. Changes in weather and lighting require additional space in between vehicles to react appropriately.
- Keep your windshield, windows and mirrors clean. Fill up your windshield wiper fluid.
- Check your defrosters and windshield wipers to make sure they are working properly.
- Minimize distractions. It doesn't matter whether the road is familiar or not, driving and walking during dark is always more dangerous.
- Pay attention to your surroundings and look up at intersections. As a pedestrian, make eye contact with drivers and keep volume down on earbuds if you must wear them.
